

Alison Morton's Reader Survey

Genres, as described unprompted by people completing the survey

Historical Fiction

Regency
Dual time-line novels
Medieval
Timeslip
Historical Romance
History, 70% 18th, 19th and 20th Century, 30% Other
Alternate history
Historical mysteries
Historical crime
historical fantasy
Post-colonial

Thrillers/crime/mystery/spies

Thrillers/crime
Crime
Mysteries
Thrillers
Scandinavian mysteries
Crime/Mystery
Cozy Mysteries
cozy crime
Detective stories
Psychological thrillers
Genealogy Mystery
Suspense
Golden Age & cozy crime
Mystery/Thriller
Spy Novels
Police Procedural

Non fiction

Memoirs
Transport textbooks
biography
Memoirs & Biographies
History
Historical textbooks
True life
Cooking
Autobiography
Real lives
historical nonfiction
Cookery books
Non fiction geeky stuff

Any social observation

“Women”

Contemporary women's fiction
Commercial women's fiction
Women's fiction
Women's Literature
Chick lit
Women's fiction
Women's fiction (commercial/literary)
Contemporary fiction

Romance

Contemporary romance
Romantic comedy
Choc lit
Romance suspense
Regency Romances
Romance - Chic Lit

Science fiction & fantasy

Science fiction
Fantasy
Horror
Paranormal
Fantasy/horror
Mythical
Magical

Adventure

Action and adventure
Military fiction

YA

Young Adult
Children's

Fiction (Other)

Literary Fiction
The classics
Modern fiction
Saga
Light novels like David Lodge
Drama
Contemporary Fiction
I don't like to limit myself to genre. I read very broadly and I'm more drawn to an intriguing story than genre. Good writing is v important to me too
Contemporary literature
Family saga

ebook

General contemporary fiction

Inspirational

African

Humour

Western

Quirky

Modern

Fiction, Classics, Historical & (US) Crime

Hardback

Things like the 100 year old man who climbed out of a window and disappeared or the Harold Fry book about the man who walked across England or the curious tale of the dog in the night time. Can I call this Quirky Fiction?